A gorgeous fall day at the Sandhill Crane Paddle with NWIPA

October 27, 2014

Wilderness Inquiry’s Canoemobile joined the Kankakee River Sandhill Crane Paddle hosted by the Northwest Indiana Paddling Association. It was a splendid autumn day with sunny weather and beautiful fall colors. On the Kankakee River in northwestern Indiana, over two hundred paddlers joined the 8.5 mile paddle in canoes and kayaks, and about fifty of those paddlers were in Wilderness Inquiry’s 24’ Voyageur canoes. The site of the take out was at Dunn’s Bridge, a historic bridge made from a Ferris wheel from the 1893 World’s Fair in Chicago. After a small, delicious feast at the end of the paddle, the groups made their way over to Jasper-Pulaski Fish and Wildlife Area to witness the big migration of the sandhill cranes. That marshy field area is where thousands of cranes find safe haven during their long flights. The sunset brought a perfect end to a perfect day—thank you to NWIPA for having us!
A gorgeous fall day at the Sandhill Crane Paddle with NWIPA - Wilderness Inquiry

Some of the many sandhill cranes soaring around during the vibrant sunset

Category: Partners, Places
Tags: Canoemobile, Kankakee River

Leave a Reply

Name

Email (will not be published)

Website

Comment

Submit Comment

Support Our Programs
3/30/2015

A gorgeous fall day at the Sandhill Crane Paddle with NWIPA - Wilderness Inquiry

DONATE NOW

Subscribe

Share The
A gorgeous fall day at the Sandhill Crane Paddle with NWIPA - Wilderness Inquiry